Lower your score by improving one aspect of your game

This week's Hero...

Congratulations to Ryan de Jonge from the Golf Management Campus whose hard work on the range, both with his coaches and practising alone, has paid off. He made the cut and finished tied for 48th in the Cape Province Open at George Golf Club – his first big tournament event.

We wish him luck for his next two events – the North West Open at Potch Golf Club and the Northern Amateur at CCJ.

We are so proud of you, Ryan

Find your truth

Before you can let the club do the work

We want you to hit better golf shots with every iron in your bag. Besides the design of the head, the next most important aspect is your lie angle. When your lie angle matches your swing, your irons work better for you.

Find your lie >

If you're struggling with hooked iron shots, your lie angle could be too upright.

If your iron shots are going right, there's a good chance your lie angle is too flat.

Many brands try and solve the problems they think each golfer might have at different handicap levels by creating off-the-shelf irons with a specific lie angle. But that might not be right for you.

We're here to help you hit better approach shots

Build your best game

Breaking through to lower scores for the first time is a great feeling. By isolating specific aspects of the game you need to improve, we can help you make big achievements more easily.

How many rounds could you go without a three-putt?

How many could you sink from greenside?

7 6 5 4 3

What if you were comfortable hitting any iron in your bag?

How much further down the fairway could you go?

How important is playing better golf to you?
