Slow play

Here are two thoughts you should keep in mind with regards to slow play...

"You don't have to race to pick up the pace"

"It's about keeping up with the group in front of you, not about staying ahead of the group behind you."

Think about it, take it in and put it into practice.

Thirty-five metres further

Speed vs. launch

Smash factor measures the efficiency of the conversion of your clubhead speed to ball speed. The closer your impact is to the sweet spot, the faster your ball speed, and the higher your smash factor.

LPGA Professionals find the sweet spot and have a good smash factor, but there's more to their efficiency (converting every mph into metres).

Players with an efficient tee shot swing also attack the ball and make contact on their upswing. Most of you should be looking for an attack angle of about 5°. That will raise your launch angle, take spin off the ball, and create extra carry and distance.

Book a tee-shot swing assessment

Let's create more great experiences for you. Let's create greater thrills and better walks. Let's have a look at your tee-shot efficiency: your impact position and consistency, and your launch conditions created. Let's go for better.

Pivot perfect

It's all connected

Your arm power and shifting of your weight both contribute to power when you pivot in your backswing, but there's more to it. If your body isn't strengthened properly, your swing will be affected. Here are some common mistakes:

- Too much arm swinging
- Too much swaying side to side
- Torso not twisting

You need to strengthen your pivot with strength exercises for your entire body to get the most out of your swing.

Be the best you can be

Every golfer pivots in their backswing but not everyone pivots the same way. You need to understand how your body moves to unlock your potential. An assessment will help you do this.

If you engage in these exercises, you agree that you do so at your own risk and assume all risk of injury to yourself.

Hideki wins with incredible playoff eagle!

Srixon staffer, Hideki Matsuyama, won his eighth PGA Tour title at the Sony Open this weekend. His second on the par-5 18th, was a 250-metre 3-wood shot into the sun. It stopped just 3 feet from the cup. Incredible stuff! Hats off, Hideki Matsuyama!
