Become a great putter

What is your putting success rate from 20 feet out on the course?

Putting precision

A game of inches

Which putter length is correct for you? 33-, 34- or 35-inch? To find out, we'll need to know how tall you are. Once we've fit you with the correct length putter, you're going to find it a lot easier to develop a consistent putting stroke.

Let's find your length

How's your posture?

Putter length influences your posture at address. Too long and you'll stand too far from the ball. Too short and you'll cramp yourself for room. Both scenarios negatively affect your ability to make putts.

You should be able to drop a ball from your lead eye so that it lands on the ball you're addressing.

What's your dividing line?

Are you after more spin and feel, or are you chasing higher speeds and longer carry? Srixon's new Z-STAR DIVIDE comes in two options, but whichever one you choose, you're going to enjoy the view.

Find your flow state

Slow things down

Learning to slow down between shots can go a long way to helping you to stay calm and centred out on the course.

Save shots, not seconds

After a few bad shots, do you walk faster to the next shot? Take one practice swing instead of your usual two – or skip them altogether. Afraid of getting in your playing partner's way? You might save a few seconds but you're wasting shots and your own time.

Walking slower gives you the time to regroup and plot your bounce back.

Taking three deep breaths can actually slow your heart rate down and reduce tension. You always have thirty seconds to breathe.

Save yourself shots

Slow down a little and save yourself plenty of shots and stress. We'll help you with mental tricks and strategies that make it easier for you to stay in control when the going gets tough.
