From the Club

We have done months of preparation and deliberation and you should start to see some real work on the changes starting to take place in the next couple of weeks.

In the meantime we are busy preparing for a new cart path and cart parking area to the left of the hedge, so be warned that in the next week or so we will put that new path into action.

The paving you can see taking place in front of the bar is for additional seating for the new deli area which will spill out in front of the bar and under the large blue gum tree.

Watch this space... more details to follow very soon.

Golf Management Campus Bursary Day

The Golf Management Campus raises money at a golf day each year to cover the tuition expenses of a student from a previously disadvantaged background.

The Golf Management Campus' tagline is "Turning Dreams into Reality" – and that truly is the case with our bursary students who would otherwise not have the opportunity of pursuing a career in golf.

If you are in a position to support the event in any way please get in touch with Joanita. We would love players, sponsors, donations – any contribution is welcome.

A one-sided putt is never fun

Do you tend to miss putts more on one side of the hole?

Let us know

Putting precision

This lie reveals your true target

Even with a rhythmic and consistent putting stroke, if you're playing with the incorrect lie angle, your putts are likely starting on a false target line.

Once we've fitted you for a putter with a lie angle that complements your posture, you're on your way to having more fun on the greens.

Stay grounded

Is the toe or heel of your putter off the ground at address? Do you miss putts predominantly on one side of the hole? There's a good chance the issue stems from the lie angle of your putter and not your stroke.

To hit more putts on your intended target line, the sole of your putter should rest on the ground as you address your putt.

A shift in lie angle, of as little as one or two degrees, could be the difference between shaving the edges and finding the heart of the cup!

More your putter head. greenside magic

The new Srixon Z-STAR DIVIDE

doesn't only make it easier to spin those tricky greenside shots, it also gives you a clearer view of the amount and direction of that spin.

Find your flow state

Blow away first-tee jitters

On the first tee, we're all anxious to make a great opening swing. Controlling your breathing will help you positively channel this nervous energy into a fairway-finding swing.

Centre yourself to find the centre

Taking three deep breaths helps to slow your heartrate and activate your parasympathetic nervous system, reducing anxiety and eliminating the fight-or-flight response that makes you tense.

Controlled breathing will help you to clear your mind and centre yourself before taking the shot.

Give yourself breathing room

Just like deep breathing, a consistent pre-shot routine is a great way to calm and centre yourself. If you haven't got a pre-shot routine or you're struggling with any other aspect of your game, let's spend some time on the range.
