The right equipment helps

Easier to hit the 'middle'

The biggest challenge most golfers experience with their irons is inconsistent contact. Ball strikes wide of the sweet spot. Ball strikes very low on the face. Both leave you short. When you're targeting a green, wide or short – no difference. You've lost at least one shot. New technologies can help.

Despite the narrower topline (that creates a great look at address) the moderate offset and longer blade lengths all work to create forgiveness and a straighter ball flight. Additionally, the Mainframe Face on the Srixon ZX4 Irons maximises face flex and offers greater ball speed.

Hit more greens

If you're struggling to hit greens with mid or especially short irons, then look to start an improvement journey. You could look at how technology might help you now. If the Srixon ZX4 Irons are right for you game, then enjoy the results.

The best work-life balance activity?

We've become much more aware of the need to invest in our health.

Smartwatches that track steps, heart rate and more have become the norm.

We're offsetting desk time with these devices during gym workouts, runs and cycles. But what about golf?

Anyone who plays a round of golf wearing a smartwatch will be pleasantly surprised to discover that they get their full allotment of daily steps at a healthy, moderate heart rate. All the while, enjoying the outdoors and creating memories with friends. Sounds better than an hour on a treadmill.

Let's help a friend

Do you know someone with a smartwatch who used to play golf? Why not bring back to the game and make a real difference to their health and their work-life balance.
